I. H. THOMAS GIVES LABOR PARTY VIEW OF FOREIGN POLICY

Britain Not Anxious for Break, He Says, but Will Warn France If It Heads the Wrong Way

Mr. Chamberlain Strikes Note of Defiance to Liberals Who Propose to Aid Labor

LONDON, Jan. 18—In the resumption of debate on the speech from the throne today J. H. Thomas, the railwaymen's secretary, alluded briefly to the international connections of the British Labor Party. He said that party did not regret and was not going to apologize for its association with internationalists.

Dealing with Great Britain's foreign policy, Mr. Thomas said:

"We have been asked how we are going to deal with France. God, forbid that any of our words should, be construed that we are anxious to be take with France or talk about ward, france were, he added, real friendship did not consist in pretending that all was well when all was not. He condemned France's attitude on the reparation question and said that when France was following the wrong path and heading for disaster it ought to be told so. He declared that because of the British Government's vacillating foreign policy France was treating the former with contempt.

Mr. Thomas attacked the Government for its failure to relieve unemployment. It was only after four years of pleading from Labor that something be done, he taid that Mr. Baldwin had suddenly concluded that protection was the one and only contition.

"That's all humbus," exclaimed Mr. Thomas, "How can you cure unemployment by restricting trade?"

Labor's single deaire, he added, was to make the country worthy of the citizens who showed patriotism during the period of its greatest trial.

Mr. Thomas repeated Labor's charge that the Conservative regime had (Continued on Page-2, Column 7)

Farmer-Labor Choice

Party Drive

By a Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Califf, Jan. 18—
The Farmer-Labor Party will seek to cerral the Socialist Party, Non-Partisan League, Farmers' Union and similar groups, George G. Kidwell, chairman of the state executive committee of California for the Farmer-Laborites, told a representative of The Christian Science Monflor. On Jan. 27 a meeting in San. Francisco of the executive officers of these various factions will try to mount a single political platform and lay plans for a state convention to be held about March 20.

NATIONS WELDED BY AMBASSADORS. NEW PEACE PLAN

Ministers to Belgium Instanced as Able Group to Deliberate and Report on Issues

By GEORGE T. ODELL
WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—One of the ablest students of international law in the United States outlined to me a plan for advancing the cause of peace and establishing a tribunal for amicable adjustment of international affairs which has never been published before. Rejecting all methods for maintaining a peaceable equilibrium is the world which political experience has proved futile since the days of the first Roman Republic, he has attempted to consolidate in his plan the stable traditions of civilized governments. stable traditions of civilized governments.

Because of his position he felt that it would not be proper to offer his plan for the Bok prize, and for the same reason he has requested me to suppress his name. But the plan itheir, I believe, is worthy of consideration in any discussion of the peace movement and it is unique inasmuch as it requires but a single act, by the President of the United States to inflate it. Briefly, it is this:

That the President acting through the Secretary of State, should instruct the American Ambassador to some peculiarly friendly country any Heighum—to call upon the Foreign Minister of that country and request him to summon a conference of all the diplomatic, representatives in Brussels.

That at the conference the American Ambassador should present a proposal from the President of the United States, that the diplomatic representatives of all countries accredited to Belgium, should form themselves into a permanent council, and that all nations not represented at Brussels should be invited to send ambassadors to sit also in that council.

Government Under No Circumstances to Resort to Inflation -War Budget to Be Cut

By Special Cable PARIS, Jan. 18-Raymond Poincaré is to push through his program of sentative. "fiscal patriotism." It is next Tuesday that the new drastic bill by which France is to obtain nearly 7.500,000, 1000 francs from new sources will be discussed, but in the meantime there is a lively combat in the Chamber of Deputies on the mere question of fixing a date. The Government will not permit new expenditure which is not amply covered, but those who are interested in the proposed pensions bill insisted on it. There was a passionate debate, and M. Poincaré promised that the pensions reform would be voted before the end of Parliament, on condition that the necession of the future Anatolian Railway is still prevoking lively incidents at Angora. M. Poincaré posed a question of confidence and obtained 360 votes against 215. This, though ample, is the amallest majority the Chanber has given him and it is obvious that unless he carries through his financial program quickly he will find his majority dwindling seriously.

Talk of Barthou Cabinet

Indeed, in some quarters, one can already hear talk of a Barthou Cabinet, which is said to be ready. The chances are, however, that Parliament, having been scared by the unprecedented falls of the franc, having been brought to realize the secessity for better budgetary financing and an increase in taxation, will now accept the governmental measures.

the governmental measures.

M. Poincaré appealed to the patriotic sense. France had passed through a grave crisis during the war but, thanks to national calm and confi-dence, had successfully emerged. It was sufficient for the Government to show its determination in replying to the attack on the franc for currency

France Preparing to Forestall Britain, Which May Soon Offer Moscow Recognition

By Special Cable
PARIS, Jan. 18-With the coming of a Labor Government in England, which will undoubtedly recognize Bol-shevist Russia, the French Govern-ment is preparing, if possible, to fore-stall it. In any case whichever country acts first it is now certain that the example of recognizing the de jure Government in Moscow will be followed by most European countries. Although the United States maintains its former attitude toward the Soviet Government there has been a gradual Government there has been a gradual change in Europe for a long time. In France, the Poincaré Government has never been hostile, although difficulties have arisen when frequent negotiations, unrecognized and unofficial, have taken place. Around the Elysee President Millerand has many anti-Bolshevists advisers and the anti-Bolshevists advisers and the Elysée is still opposed to a renewal of normal relations. But the Government is prepared, in certain conditions, to go half way. For example, with regard to pre-war debts, France demands that these should be acknowledged, but it would then be content, having obtained acknowledgment of the basis of any arrangement that French bondholders might directly reach with the Russian Government.

War debts from government to government will be treated exactly as France hopes its own war debts will be treated. France is prepared to cancel them. France asks, however. that French nationals, who have been dispossessed in Russia by the revo-lution, shall have their property re-stored, or be compensated. Again France asks the abstention of the Russian Government from revolutionary propaganda in France, promising in its turn that there will be no anti-Soviet propaganda encouraged by France.

These conditions have hitherto, even in a modified form, constituted a stumbling block, but it is believed that they can be overcome. Although cer-tain French newspapers pretend that the French view is almost identical with that recently expressed by the United States, the French attitude ap-pears to be somewhat different. It is desired to find some way of recogniz-ing the Russian Government. Steps definitely in this direction are to be

Lynn and Medford Petitions Lead State Board to Act-Reconsideration Looked For

The Department of Public Utilities of Massachusetts decided today to hold a public hearing in the State House on Monday, Jan. 28, at 10:30 on petitions of the cities of Lynn and Medford asking that the 20 per cent increase in commutation tickets on the Boston & Maine Railroad be reconsid-

The House of Representatives refered to the committee on rules, without comment, the Senate order for an investigation for the second time by the Department of Public Utilities the rafe increase decision in favor of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, Boston & Maine and Boston & Albany railroad companies whereby they are now charging 20 per cent more for commutation tickets. It is remarked in the State House that the department decision to hold another public hearing on the railroad rate raise question, relates only to the Boston & Maine Railroad, and that the Boston & Maine Railroad, and that unless other petitions are filed and favorably considered by the commission the hearing will have to do only with Boston & Maine commutation prices.

It is believed at the State House that a successful effort will be made to have the department consider the reopening of its decision favorably affecting the commutation ticket charges of the three roads.

Lynn Council Acts

The petition of the City of Lynn for a rehearing in the commutation ticket problem is a resolution passed by the City Council deploring and pro-testing the action of the utilities de-partment in "granting the increase which affects over 1,000,000 commuters a year who use the 12-ride tickets," and they ask that the commission reconsider its award.

Allan Brooks, assistant secretary to the commission, today notified Joseph W. Attwill, city clerk of Lynn, of the date of the hearing. Charles A. Cough-lin and the Board of Aldermen of Medford were also notified and it is Medford were also notified and it is announced that representatives of the General Court and state senators who represent districts along the line of the Roston & Maine railroad will be notified of the hearing.

M. Poincaré referred to the tremendous resources of France, giving figures to show the increase in foreign trade. In no circumstances would the Government resort to inflation, On the contrary, it had withdrawn nearly 2.000.000.000 francs in notes from circulation. The war budget was being cut down, though it was pretended that France was militaristic. Indee it is announced that France's army, apart from native troops, will be reduced this year to 370,000.

Income tax collectors this year are busily explaining to the taxpayers just how the additional 10 per cent tax to make up the National Bank tax defect, is reckoned. Henry F. Long, Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, said today:

This additional 10 per cent tax is reckoned from the amount of tax the taxpayer has to pay in 1924 on his income of 1923. In other words, the tax one has to pay this year on his income is 10 per cent more than it would have been if the levy had not been made by the Legislature.

The taxpayer first determines his 1923 taxable income. He figures the amount of tax he has to pay on this and to this sum he adds 10 per cent of the sum he has to pay. This additional amount is to make up the money used by cities and towns from the bank tax which the Supreme Court said was lilegally exacted.

Powell denied that a college fraining along scientific lines was too theoretical to prove of value in industrial life.

Admitting that the young graduate still had much to do to familiarize himself with the practicalities of the business, world, he nevertheless declared that the need of industry too day is technically trained men whose achooling has started them in the schooling has started them in the right direction. He applauded the present trend in colleges and engiment of co-operative courses where the student mest effectively combines practice with theory, and concluded the address by applying his general recommendations to the specific field recommendations to the specific field of marine engineering and ship construction with which he fi identified.

Ada. M. Cos of Wellesley's department of Spanish.

Later lectures in the series will be on the literature of modern Italy, given by Prof. Bruno Roselli, head of the department of Italian at Vassar, and another on German Hierature by Marryn Baily of Boston University. Another lecture in this year's series will be on Russian literature, but the speaker is not yet announced. If the four-year arrangement is carried out, there will be given during the next three years lectures on the Norse literature, on that of Finland, on the literature of southern Europe. Rumania and Bulgaria, of Czechoslovakia, and perhaps on the literature of Persia.

School, Brighton, ow which Mr. Sullivan based a complaint of spurious composition and British propaganda, requesting that the book be thrown out of the schools, has been fixed on Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, according to a letter sent to the press by Richard J. Lane, chairman of the Boston School Committee. The book has not been on the authorized list of school books for 20 years, Mr. Lane says, and has not appeared in editions of the Natural Music Reader, in which the verse was found, since 1898. The volume falling into the hands of Mr. Sullivan's son was a stray copy, he says.

Mr. Lane stated further that the director of music in the Beston schools, John A. O'Shea, has tried for a number of years to procure an accepted standardized form of "The Star-Spangled Bagner" to be sung at public functions. Dr. Holmes wrote the verse objected to by Mr. Sullivan in response to a requirest that some reference to, the Civil War be added to "The Star-Spangled Banner," Mr. Lane explains.

President's Prerogative

That, in sum, is the plan of a man, experienced in international affairs, for constructing a Council of Nations.

It would not require an act of Congress or ratification by any parliamentary body. It requires the initiative of but one man to find out whether it can be accomplished, and the proponent of the plan thinks that the President of the United States should be that man. The man who gave me this plan is not in favor of the League of Nations.

the League of Nations.

Andrew Carnegie gave millions for the promotion of peace. The largest single sum he contributed to that cause was $10,000,000, with which he founded the Carnegie, Endowment for International Peace. He also built the Peace Palace at The Hague and the building of the Pan-American Union in Washington.

The income from the Carnegie endowment is appropriated to assist many institutions for the promotion of peace and international comity. Among these are: the Institute of International Law, the American Institute of International Law and various societies and journals of in-ternational law and fellowship awards to the Academy of Interna-tional Law at The Hague. The In-ternational Parliamentary Union and the International Arbitration League are also sustained in part from the Carneric Endowment Carnegie Endowment.

The endowment has accumulated one of the most nearly complete libraries on peace and international affairs to be found in America, to which any interested person may have free access. It is preparing a social and economic history of the World War which is being issued by chapters as they are finished. Through its educa-tional department it has developed a Suropean organization for exchange of information. In fact, speaking broadly, the present directors of the endowment are endeavoring to fulfill the purpose of Andrew Carnegie, "to hasten the abolition of international war, the foulest blot upon our civiliza-tion." and then, "to advance the prog-ress, elevation and happiness of man."

Miss Addams' Work

Among the wonten of the world no name stands out more prominently than that of Jane Addams for conthan that of Jane Addams for con-sistent and untiring effort in the cause of peace. The Women's Inter-national League for Peace and Free-dom was founded at The Hague in April, 1915, when the nations of Europe had been at war less than a year. Its purpose was to consolidate the influence of the women to the end that hostilities might cease. Delegates from 14 countries—some of them at war with each other—went to that conference. It did not achieve its purpose, but the league has flourished, and today has branches in $4 coun-next international conference was held while the "peace treaties" were being negotiated in Paris, and from it came a strong protest against the harshness of the terms that were being imposed upon the conquered. That protest, however, failed to realize any amelioration of the terms.

The branches in each country are autonomous, and the international autonomous, and the international office in Geneva acts as a clearing house for information. The American branch hab 5500 members, scattered through most of the states, and its immediate purpose is to promote an active campaign for a "Stop-the-Next-War Congress of debtor and creditor nations to be called by the President of the United States." The objects of things for which they are now seeking political action are: Recodification of the conference method of the United States." The objects of this conference are: that conference are:

especially Halti and Nicaragua. The fourth biennial international conference of the W. I. L. will be held in time the International Summer School, another Institution inaugurated by the

When the National Education Association invited delegates from all over the world to the World Conference on Education at San Francisco last summer, one of the objects its officers had in mind was to promote world peace by bringing 5,000,000 teachers into more fruitful and sympathetic relations with each other.
Undoubtedly the adults of the world who survived the experiences of the World War will be loath to engage in another such holocust. But what

The World Conference on Education

The World Conference on Education took the initiative to promote a system of education that will result in a better mutual understanding among the youth of various nations and that resolution has been carried back to these 5,000,000 teachers. It has recommended that text books be exchanged between countries and that information obtained by school chil-dren about other countries shall be presented to them in scrupulous ac-curacy and in the spirit of fairness and good will.

Peace as School Course

Peace as School Course

The proper educational body for each country is requested to outline, for its own schools a system of training that will cultivate in children habits of thought and action appropriate to effective membership in the world community. An outline of this system is to be presented at the next world conference. Certainly no advocate of conference. Certainly no advocate of peace could envisage a more sincere expression of the will for peace than expression of the will for peace than was manifested at this conference of men and women from 60 different countries representing 31 distinct language groups.

In the "Stx P's" (six prominent welfare issues) of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers, peace has the first place. This is what that organization with its thousands of members and branches in every state stands for:

1. Reduction of armaments by international agreement.

2. Recodification of international nstions. To speak of "recodification" of in-Ap speak of "recodification" of in-ternational law is slightly inaccurate since there never has been any codifi-cation of that law. To codify inter-national law is one of the proposals of the Bok peace plan, but before that was framed the Pan-American Union already had arranged for a commis-sion to meet in Brazil in 1925 for that member of that commission.

Clubwomen's Stand

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is an association of 12,000 women's clubs claiming an aggregate membership of 2,000,000. By stimulating the study of international affairs, and by urging the members to "persistent and pertinent activity," the officers of the federation are endeavoring to forward the peace movement. Albeit the heads of this organization have been timid about "entangling alliances," dreading the possibility of becoming linked in some way with an activity that might be embarrassing to the Government, nevertheless, in behalf of those issues which they do indorse, the officers are willing to co-operate with other organizations.

Courses of study are suggested to the affiliated clubs, covering the topics of international law; movement toward international law; movement toward international law; movement toward international peace; the relations of the United States to other countries, and geographic readjustments. CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 18 (Special) The action of the New Hampshire Federation of Farm Bureaux, which met in annual convention as part of the New England Farm Conference the New England Farm Conference yesterday, in initiating a movement for a convention to revise the State Constitution was due to the influence of the special committee on taxation which has been at work for two years. The members of this committee are Robert P. Bass, former Governor; Raymond B. Stevens, probable Democratic nominee for Governor this year, and Frank H. Pearson, a member of the state Legislature.

This committee found that no adequate changes in the tax laws which the Rev. James J. O'Brien, who delivered the invocation. Lieut.-Gov.

Alvan T. Fuller was togstmaster.

Mrs. Davis wore a miniature of Franklin at her throat and had on the table before her other relics including his spoon, a shoe buckle and a ring. After relating many interesting aneodotes in the life of her illustrious forbear and giving her hearers an intimate view of his family life, Mrs. Davis spoke of the effect on his career on the life of the Nation. She said:

Poor Richard says, "Silks, satins, scarlets, velvets, put out the kitchen are." His wife could cook, his daughter could cook, my mother could cook, I can cook. The practical side of our education was never neglect.

At 40 years of age Benjamin Franklin decided that he had made sufficient lin decided that he had made sufficient money to retire from business and devote the rest of his life to the services of his country. How many of you here, or in our money-loving country, are willing to say at 40 years of age that they have made enough? In speaking to you I am trying to put myself back in his place, to ask you to remember when the colonies needed help there was no Monroe Doctrine. We were not ashamed to ask for help from France. First Democrat

Mr. Curtis traced the history of the Saturday Evening Post from its es-tablishment by Franklin in 1767 to 1897 when he bought it as a bankrupt magazine. He paid $1000 for it. Previously to this not one issue of the paper had been missed, although the name had been changed from its origi-nal title of Pennsylvania Gazette. He remarked on the coincidence that, like Franklin, the present owner and editor, George Horace Lorimer, were New Englanders who went to Philadelphia to make their fortunes.

Mayor Curley referred to Franklin

ART At the Copley Gallery

Oils by David Reasoner are being shown at the Copley Gallery on Newbury Street. The artist immediately impresses one with his genuinely decorative interpretation of nature. He has a definitely emotional quality, both in his color and in the sweeping expanses of space, which is carried along in the winding curves of valleys and preceding mountains. He paints with a in the winding curves of varieys and receding mountains. He paints with a careful, smooth brush, which finds its way over difficult surfaces of cloud and rock in a realistic ane at the same time, picturesque fashion. His colors are perhaps more subtle in the paler tonalities.

J. Edward Fitzgerald, who is also exhibiting at the gallery, sees nature in a more restive, dramatic mood, His sketches are dene with a few strokes, which give direction, motion and atmosphere; in other words, they are elemental. Color does not play as important a part with him; he is interested rather in the silvery gray of skies, twilight and for subject and atmospheric effect than for decorative quality.

Seymour Haden

At the Casson Galleries on Boylston Street, etchings by Sir Francis Seymour Haden are being exhibited. "This artist, whose name is linked with those of Whistler, Rembrandt and Méryon in the history of etching, restored painter-etching as an art, and became the greatest living landscape etcher of his day. He was a great student of Rembrandt, and the influence of the master can be seen in such subjects as the "Water Meadow." He did nearly all his work out-of-doors directly from the subject. Most of his plates are done in dry-point.

Most of his plates are done in pure etching. Some are done in dry-point. There are also mezzotints.

(allegro and andantino grazioso). Mr. Loeffler's "Music for four stringed instruments" is dedicated to the memory of Victor Chapman. It is divided into three parts, the second of which bears the title "Le Saint Jone de Paques." Evidently a definite pro-gram underlies this music, for in adgram underlies this music, for in addition to the dedication and the title of the second part, there are other indications that such is the case. For example, in the last movement a bright military march is introduced, near the end of which the beating of drums is imitated it would seem that the composer has either said too much or too little in the meager explanatory hints which he has vouchsafed his hearers. It is possible to read many things into this music, and had the composer been content to let it stand as music pure and simple it most certainly would have gained thereby. Yet he seemingly feared that his music might not convey just the precise shade of meaning which he would have it do, so he gently jogs his lis-tener's elbow and half whispers in his ear what he would have him think, yet so vaguely that he merely succeeds in distracting the attention

Mr. Loeffler's music needs a very definite explanatory program to convey its meaning properly. With-out doubt the composer was deeply moved when he wrote it, but Mr Loeffler's grief is no ordinary. and to express it in music he utilizes terms far removed from the usual ones.

As music, then, this composition is vague. As music to illustrate and intensity a program it possibly better succeeds of its purpose, but unfortunately a complete program is not supplied the listener. Composer and listener seem to be groping about in the dark, the one trying to make his meaning clear without venturing on a single plain statement, the other trying to piece together these scraps of information and in all probability getting the whole thing wrong, alto-gether a most annoying and unfruitful proceeding.

The quartet did not play with its accustomed skill. Too often was the tone ill balanced, the cello overpowerful. Too often did Mr. Betti's violin whistle and scratch, too often was there a sense of rhythmical uncertainty. S. M.,

· IN SHOE INDUSTRY

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 18 (Special)—Continued improvement in the shoe industry is reported by the manufacturers in this city with the receipt of large orders due to the spring buying. Several buyers from the New York markets and other buying centers have been in the city during the past few days. Added production and quicker deliveries are the aims of the Haverhill manufacturers this season.

The manufacturers have completed plans for the meeting of executives and foremen with the shoe plant owners and have arranged for—a banquet in connection with the first event which will be held in the vestry of the North church next Thursday evening. General officers and business agents of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union will be guests and the committees representing both industrial groups have been invited to be present.

This afternoon at 4:30 literary exercises honoring Edgar Allen Poe are to be held in the rooms of the Boston Authors Club, 8 Newbury Street. morrow afternoon the tablet, scribed by the club and memorializing "Poe—Romancer, Poet, Critic," will be unveiled in Edgar Allen Poe Square, which is at Broadway and Carver streets in the South End.

streets in the South End.

The tablet is being placed approximately at the location of the poet's birthplace. There is some uncertainty regarding the exact site and probably the actual house has not been standing for many years. There is only meager information available about the earliest years of the poet's life. His father and mother, David and Elizabeth Arnold Poe were strolling Irish players who, in January 1898, were-glaying an engagement at the old Federal Street Theater. One of the books concerning Poe's life dismisses them frostily as "seeming to be worthy people" and passes at once to other and more significant details affecting the poet's career.

The neighborhood of Carver Street may not have changed greatly in the intervening time, except to become a little more gray, a neighborhood where houses lean on one another and where even the cate approach; and didustrious. Economic conditions in Europe to-day show clearly that ministers of finance could follow profitably the policy of Alexander Hamilton, first Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, said-Ellot Wadsworth, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, last evening to members of the Mas-sachusetts Society of the Sons of the Revolution, at their twenty-third an-nual dinner in the Hotel Somerset.

LAMPOON TO KEEP CLEAN HUMOR PLAN

Increased Circulation Held Evidence That Students and Graduates Approve New Policy

Following the annual election of officers of the Harvard Lampoon last night. William Scott '25, the incoming president, declared that the policy of a clean Lampoon, so ably started last fall by F. H. Nichols '24, his predecessor, would be continued. Robert E. Sumner '25 was elected Ibis or vice-president, Merrill Garcelon '25, treasurer, and Charles E. Thorp '25, secretary.

tion for clean journalism, the Lam-poon editors quietly sounded the opinion of their acquaintances as to how this new step would be received by the undergraduates. The general consensus of opinion was that the student body doubted that the Lampoon could continue to regard itself as humorous publication.

The outcome of this indirect canvass was not surprising nor did it deter the editors from this plan, since hu-morous college publications in all parts of the United States have been offering questionably decent humor for so long that students are skeptical about the success of any devia-

The statement was made last year in the Los Angeles Times by the faculty advisor of publications for the University of Southern California, when asked to permit the establishment of a new humorous publication in that college, that of all college humorous mazzines only the Lamhumorous magazines only the Lam poon was fit to leave its editorial offices and that the permission requested would not be granted.

After seven issues under the new policy, several Lampoon editors made the same inquiries as before. From all accounts among the undergradu-ates of Harvard, the Lampoon is much funnier since the change, and better reading. This statement is sub-stantiated by the fact that the circulation has been increased materially. Among Harvard graduates the new policy has met with even greater approval and letters of congratulation e been received from all parts of United States. The following is illustrative:

I just finished looking over the Christmas number, and for decent humor of the kind that a fellow would not have to apologize for when he takes the issue home, you can't be beat. SOLUTION IS CITED Mr. Bedaux Explains How, He Measures Efforts of Workers

INDUSTRIAL PEACE

"Peace in industry will never come until the worker is contented. The good workman is not content while feeling that he is unjustly held down to the level of the poorest workman nor will a plecework system which leads to unjustified increases, and arbitrary cuts be susceptible of lasting good. The worker must know that he is doing well and how weil." This was the doctrine voiced by Charles E. Bedaux, industrial engineer of Cleveland, O., and principal speaker of Cleveland, U., and principal speaker at the joint meeting of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Boston Chapter of the Society of Industrial Engineers, and the New England Section of the Taylor Society held last night in the Hotel Westminster.

"Increasing Production Through

"Increasing Production Through Wage Incentives," was the general subject of discussion. Mr. Bedaux said he preferred to talk on "The Expression and Appreciation of Effort' and then outlined for the 300 "man-agers of industry" present from all parts of New England his system of measuring the value of a worker's

This system, he said, instead of holding a prize in front of the machine operator for merely increasing his or her output of pieces, pounds, or inches of material, aims to reward the worker not solely for producing "most," but "best," with the least wear and tear on himself and the machine; thus fostering contentment in the worker by giving him confidence that his man-ager is rewarding him for work "well

Several managers testified that, al-though skeptical of this system at first, they had been completely con-verted when they had given it a trial, Prof. W. E. Freeland of Massachusetts Institute of Technology made a plea to industrial managers in gen-eral to allow the "engineer" to assist them and to New England industrialists in particular to adopt modern methods or be outstripped by their more enterprising competitors in the

FARMERS TO UNITE ON STANDARD TIME

Massachusetts 'Agricultural Societies Vote to Form New Organization

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 18-Day light saving repeal took on a new aspect yesterday afternoon when the legiplative committee of the Massachusetts farmers' organizati nously to form a standard tim chusetts farmers' organizations votage unanimously to form a standard time association. This move was favored to put the farm organizations in a position to fight daylight saving through the initiative and referendem and to take such action as may seem wise to get out a big anti-daylight saving vote next fall.

This action by the legislative conference which represents virtually every farm organization in Massachusetts was taken as a result of a report of a special committee on daylight saving repeal which includes Lenile R. Smith of the State Department of Agriculture, C. D. Richardson of West Brookfield, Eben Richardson of Millis, Fred D. Griggs, secretary of the Massachusetts Farm Bureau Federation, and Howard W. Glimore of Westboro.

The legislative conference also, reported in favor of an amendment to the statutes to provide payment for damages done by partridges.

Fruit Growers to Seek

Changes in the State Law Changes in the State Law WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 18 (Special)—That the present state apple grading law permitted certain injustices to both farmer and consumer was the contention of Mr. S. L. Davenport of North Grafton, chairman of the committee on legislation of the Massachusetts Fruit Growers' Association as he spoke here yesterday at the Fruit Growers' Convention. He then outlined certain changes in the law which the committee is presenting to the Legislature at the present session.

Fruit growers and co-operative fruit marketing associations, he said, cannot use on boxes or barrels of fruit any label which is more attractive than rather uninteresting data required iaw. That is a disadvantage to by law. That is a disadvantage to farmers competing with western fruit with its highly ornamental labels. He said that the committee was trying to improve that section of the law. He declared that the present law did not forbid the overfacing of open packages by putting the best apples on top, and that a few growers had taken advantage of this opening. This is obviously unfair to the consumer and therefore detrimental in the long run to the industry as a whole. The comto the industry as a whole. The committee is introducing an amendment designed to stop the gross overfacing of open packages exposed for sale. "Every fruit grower is interested in new varieties that are higher in quality and more productive than those now grown," said Dr. J. K. Shaw of the Massachusetts experiment station. "and new varieties of unknown merit are appearing every year." He pro-posed that fruit growers should co-operate to test these new varieties in all parts of the State and under all all parts of the State and under all conditions, reporting progress from time to time at conventions like this one, and he presented a plan for such co-operative testing.

The following officers were elected: President, S. L. Davenport, North Grafton; vice-presidents, Harold Priest of Gleasondale, John Howes of Ashfield, L. W. Rice of Wilbraham, Frank B. Priest of Littleton; secretary, R. A. Van Meter, Amherst; treasurer, William H. Atkins, South Amherst; auditor, H. Ward Moore, Worcester.

Among the Railroads By FRANKLIN SNOW =

Tourists to California like to boast that they have traveled to the coast by all the routes available. Such a contention is open to serious doubt, however, for there are 11 separate and distinct routes, not to mention the numerous overlapping lines which travelers might use in order to visit certain points of interest en route, and count such a line as an additional way of reaching the coast.

Listing the direct routes available from midwestern points is difficult for this reason. Of the standard routes, one may mention the Southern Pacific (Sunset route from New Orleans); the "Golden State Route" (Rock Island-Southern Pacific, via El Paso from Chicago); the Santa Fe; the Burling-transport of the standard from the sunder of the santa for traffic from New Jersey. OURISTS to California like to terminate here, since the Long Island

From Memphis to Los Angeles, via El Paso. The Burlington has a route from Lincoln, Neb., which wanders casually across Wyoming to Billings, Mont., from which point one of the northwestern roads could be used the remainder of the distance, and the trip be counted as an additional route. It is an idle boast to assert that one has visited the coast via all available lines.

The announcement that a huge office building—presumably the largest in the world—is to be built at Thirty-Second Street and Lexington Avenue, New York, and taking in the entire block to Thirty-Third Street and Fourth Avenue, is surprising In that this location had been tentatively selected as the site of a railroad terminal devoted to suburban traffic.

It was planned to carry trains of the New Haven and New York Central roads from their present Grand Central terminus at Forty-Second Street through an extension of the existing tunnel to the proposed station. Long Island Railroad trains could readily NOTHER idol is tottering and is likely to fall. This time the blow has been dealt with an elaborate report by the fiscal commission, which has been sitting for many months in an endeavor to collect and analyze the economic facts about the Free State. Year after year, before treaty days, the Home Rule propagandists described how Ireland, when free, would have its infant industries, which had been "ruined" by Free Trade, by protecting them. The commission, to put it briefly, has turned down protection, and although President Cosgrava's declaration on the subject is still awaited, it seems fairly certain that he will be in agreement with the report. There is no doubting that if he does dismiss the idea of protection, he will run seriously in danger of breaking with the extreme section of his party. The commission's report was very candid. It says that some of the disabilities from which Irish products suffer in comparison with imported goods can be traced to lack of raw materials in Ireland; inefficient production, magagement, and marketing; the difficulty of finding skilled labor and the high rate of transport. There are few if any "infant" industries, indeed the report would rather describe them as debilitated. And after showing how through the adoption of protection outside manufacturers would enter—as they actually have entered—the Free State and give Free State industries the final blow, the report states that agriculture is and must be for a long time the principal Free State industries. The state industries the final blow, the report states that agriculture is and must be for a long time the principal Free State industries.

Five-roomed house estimated to cost £500, subsidy £100; a four-roomed house, to cost £400, subsidy £80; a three-roomed house to cost £300, subsidy £60. There would be a reduction of £10 in rural areas. This scheme would employ probably 10,000 men. The Government is also willing to spend £50,000 on the reconstruction of partially destroyed houses. In conclusion, President Coagrave said they were by no means satisfied with the action of the local authorities in regard to housing and unemployment and he hinted that the new subsidies would not be distributed through these organizations.

The Government's genuine desire for conomy has again been indicated. Fol-owing the example of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, it has decided to

Mathematics Needs Endowment
To the Editor of The Christian Science Monitor:

In times like these American generosity is pretty heavily taxed by the piteous condition, not merely of individuals, but of whole nations in other parts of the world. We even become so impervious to appeals of this kind that only some extraordinary catastrophe impresses us at all. Under such conditions it is inevitable that the normal progress of certain activities which cannot be self-supporting should be gravely endangered.

The cost of all publication in thiscountry has increased enormously during and since the war. The circulation of scientific journals is so limited that the journals in question cannot be made self-supporting.

In the paat, European journals have been depended upon to assendinate results of scientific research. Under present political and economic conditions this burden can no longer be carried by anybody but our own comtry. Our scientific productivity has increased greatly in bulk and in quality, but it is exceedingly discouraging to a young scientific man who has written a good paper to find publication difficult or indefinitely delayed. Scientific progress depends on the continued maintenance of research and publication, and progress in lines which are more practical or spectacular must in the end depend upon what the mathematicians are able to do in their own field.

A striking example of this condition is offered by the American Mathematical Society, which is responsible for the leading place which has rendered incalcuable service by stimulating in America fruitful research in the most fundamental of all sciences.
This incorporated Society has now reached such a dangerous position after a succession of unavoidable deficits that it must have an endowment fund of at least $100,000 or restrict its efforts at the very moment when it has the highest duty to expand. An endowment committee has been appointed under the chairmanship of Prof. Julian L. Coolidge of Marvard

Jugoslav Peasant Embroideries

THE Jugoslav peasant industry is reproducing the bast designs in the museums and also collecting old embroideries in the country and copying them in useful modernathings. By this means the lovely embroideries that have been the admiration of lovers of stitchery are being applied in practical ways to impers, blouses, trocks, and table sets which are brought to London, where they are sagerly bought wherever they are shown. It is hoped that very shortly a permanent depot will be established for their sale.

The stitchery is done on jumpers of very fine handwoven cotton crepe of which the threads are counted in working the pattern. These jumpers are fashioned in the same way as the peasants' shirts and are aspecially attractive. They have in front a large square of embroiders done in either blue or black thread. This is silt about half way down to allow for the turnover of a little collar that has a hand of the embroiders at the back

The sleeves have a big square of the embroidery like that in front, but in a lighter design, and they have also a border at the edge.

Another instance of the practical way in which the embroidery is applied is a becoming boudoir cap. It was made oblong panel of cross-stitch embroidery in red, with touches of him and green. Some of these caps have a little gold introduced.

The children's frocks also are very lovely. One such garment had a band of cross-stitch on the skirt and another at the waist line on the bodice, in typical Near Eastern design, and coloring, with blue and red and touches of green. Another little frock in sheer creps had a border of cross-stitch in closest, finest stitches in rose pink silk, and above this, dividing the skirt into three, two rows of openwork stitch. A band of the needlework formed.

The reason why this beautiful peasant work has kept its national characteristics while being applied to present-day needs in countries foreign to its origin, is probably because the designing, coloring, and adaptation are promoted by a native of Jugoslavia, who is in sympathy with the national tradition.

There are various bottles and carafes of different sizes that are most carates of different sizes that are most unusual. Many of these have medal-lion-like centers at each side that are depressed until they join, forming a solid medallion of glass with tiny figures carrying vines in their dance. These figures are held between the two thicknesses of glass that are pressed to form a single thickness.

With the exception of one bowl, all of the glass seen in the three collections was smooth outside, having the modeled design on the inside of the modeled design on the inside of the article. A piece of Lalique glass is all of the same color, but the varying thickness of the glass in the plain portions and the deep design, give forth varying soft tones that make the piece seem multicolored.

commonly seen, but the kind usually sold by the norists now is primrose obconics, which is the most free flowering variety. The flowers, which are illac, purple or rose in color, are borne in clusters on stout stems standing well above the leaves. Another variety called primrose kewensis has yellow flowers on much longer stems, but blooms intermittently. It makes a very pretty plant and is well worth a place in the window garden, even though it may be considered a second choice.

Then there is the so-called baby primrose, which many persons prefer to all others. The flowers of this variety are very small, but they are produced in the greatest profusion and always at the top of very long stems. This is a far showler variety than the more common obconics, but possesses a less persistent blooming habit. It is an excellent flower to choose when a potted plant is to be used as a gift, and for a somewhat limited season in winter.

Primrose obconica, however, is the stand-by of the home maker who wants a plant in her window which will always be in bloom and which will

All primroses prefer a somewhat low temperature, for which reason they should be kept away from the radiators. They will not suffer if the mercury marks only 50 at night. They mercury marks only 50 at night. They are greedy for water, however, and will wilt quickly if allowed to get dry. Neglect in this respect is the one thing that will cause them to cease blooming. On the other hand, it is possible to overwater the plants, and water must never be permitted to remain in the saucers. If the soil is allowed to get a little dry and then thoroughly saturated, the plant will fourish. Naturally, a somewhat open, porous soil, with good drainage, gives best results, and large pots are not desirable, as more moisture will collect in the soil than the roots can take up.

Few house plants are so free from the attacks of insects, which is one reason for recommending the primprose for the home window garden. If the leaves begin to turn yellow the cause, as a rule, can be assigned to lack of plant food rather than to insects, and the difficulty corrected by

"First, we call at the post office for the mail; there are always circulars and bills, even when there are no letters. Next, we buy a morning paper to see what has happened in New York since yesterday. After that we go to the bank, because it is Saturday, and the cashier may give us some money, if we are lucky. Then we do the odd chores: pick up the laundry at John Chinaman's, or the old pre-war boots being repaired at the shoemaker; are to laundry this morning. Entering the building, he questioned the workmen concerning the acoustics, sat in one of the gray wicker chairs, asked about the seating capacity, touched the pearl gray wall paper with one finger, then smiled.

"Good. Well done. Quiet, tastefully decorated. Fine room in which The paintings on the walls of the The paintings on the walls of the new theater, which were loaned by the Silvermine Artists' Guild, reminded Mr. Carman that he wanted us to make the circuit of Silvermine Valley, on the outskirts of New Canaan.

"I'll take you there at once," he remarked abruptly. "We shall get into the car—not that I use them much, but we can cover more territory. There

That is a good reason, is it not?"
We—packed ourselves in the Ford coupé and rode back through the village streets, with Mr. Carman re-peatedly ordering us to slow up or watch out, his attitude plainly indicating that only courtesy made him submit to the indignity of an automobile. Sending a canoe skimming over the surface of a mountain lake, or striding through the forest, suits his taste better than motoring.

Views on Poets and Poetry Conversation drifted to poets and poetry. Edna St. Vincent Miliay, Mr. Carman mentioned as one of America's very best poets. He quoted a few lines from her poem, "Exiled." and seemed to appreciate intensely her

One of the Carman volumes, "Songs of the Sea Children," is dedicated to James Whitcomb Riley. In response to a question about what he thought of Riley's merits as a poet, Mr. Carman declared that he considered him the most typical American poet, with a much better title to this designation that walt Whitman. And we did it, just like that, sauntering through the town, with Mr. Carman taking off his hat to one citizen, stopping to speak to another, and suddenly leaving us to dart across the road to exchange a kindly word with a new family moving into an old house not far from the ian.

"There's the new moving picture theater. It's not quite finished. I have not been inside yet; let us go and inspect,"

Seizing my arm, he started for the opposite sidewalk, keeping a more than wary eye for automobiles, which

In the gently sloping valley of the Androscoggin River in the State of Maine, where my boyhood was passed, our only visible heights worthy to be called mountains were the White Mountains, 70 miles to the west as the crow files. They were rarely visible in summer, but as September waned, from some high hill at the back of the valley, we would look for a snow bank lying like a white cloud along the western horizon. This we knew to be the first anowfail on Mt. Washington of the Presidential Range, a warning of what would follow in our own valley a few weeks later:

Thus my imagination was stirred:

Thus my imagination was stirred; and I longed to scale that snow-capped mountain, to learn of nature's unfamiliar ways, and to face her in her more repellent moods. My desires were not then gratified; and, in fact, to this day I have never set foot upon Mt. Washington, the goal of my boy-hood longing, although I have climbed hood longing, although I have climbed mountains in various parts of the earth. Years later, when climbing from Zermatt in Switzerland, a wonderland of most fascinating mountains and valleys, of raging streams and roaring avalanches, that region of mystery termed timber line was discovered; and I reveled in its mysteries. The position of timber line varies

In the Alps, for example, timber line is usually between 7500 feet and 8000 feet. On Mt. Washington, it is at 4500 feet. On Mt. The the rigors of the wintry blasts. One finds on Katahdin the strange phenomenon of a spruce tree unable to rise, crawling supinely along the granite table, scores of years old, yet scarcely two inches in diameter. These trees sometimes grow to a length of five feet or more, crooked as a snake; and, stripped of bark and bleached by the storm, they are easily mistaken for a reptile. But at the edge of the table-land, the spruces, three or four feet high, form an impenetrable mass so dense that on snowshoes one may walk across their tops with little danger of falling.

Two years ago on Pike's Peak, I had my first experience with timber line in the Rockies. There we found trees are quite two feet in diameter trees are quite two feet in diameter, but none is scarcely more than a dozen feet high. The wind, storms, and sun have cleared the bark from the most exposed side and they stand naked and white as though in silent protest of their rough treatment. The almost constant wind and the hot sun of summer have dried out the natural juices of the trees and campers find most excellent firewood, their dry trunks fat with pitch.

Bird life at timber line is scarce, but very interesting for its scarcity.

ber at about 12,500 feet.

The outposts, stragglers from the main body of the forest, bear the unmistakable scars of wounds received in flerce struggles with the elements. Gnanded and twisted — frequently nearly prostrate—their hold on earth its but from the few roots on one side which still cling, their limbs streaming like signals of distress from the leeward side. As the prevailing winds here are from the west, the limbs are outstretched like arms toward the morning sun as though pleading for warmth and shelter. Some of the nesting season, but now we hear only the sharp alarm notes. We are sure from the apparent distress of the female that their nest is close at hand, but it is so far under the shelving rock that we cannot reach it.

A flock of camp birds, the western version of the Canada Jay, comes drifting through the scraggy trees followed by a red-tailed flawk, its cries breaking the tense stillness of the mountain side. A sparrow hawk also comes winging up the heights, apparently assured of its favorite food, grasshoppers, crickets, mice and other small rodents. As we pause, entranced by the scene where, on either hand, miles of lofty peaks stretch out in a mighty panorama before us, far over our heads a golden eagle, swings immajestic circle on wings, so far as we our heads a golden eagle, swings in-majestic circle on wings, so far as we can see, quite motionless. How fitting the presence of the emblem of free-dom in these unfettered heights! As we pause, a coyote sneaks down the slope, quickly disappearing in the short timber.

Upon these solitary heights, one feels close to the creator of all things.

feels close to the creator of all things. The work of the primal forces is more in evidence, unsoftened by the gentler moods of nature. Here one has the sense of being exposed to the full strength of the mighty forces of nature unchecked by the efforts of men; in the valley there is always the sense of shelter and protection. Here nature with its sublimity and grandeur is harsh, forbidding, unfriendly—yet fascinating for these very traits. One feels the desire to soften her expressions, to modify her moods, to bring shelter and warmth and gentle rain to ameliorate the harsh conditions, almost unbestable it seems, which confront the scanty vegetation during the season of terrible rigors.

Columbia Improves Position in Squash Tennis Standing by Defeating Princeton

METROPOLITAN INTERCLUS SQUASE TENNIS STANDING (Class A)

Special from Monitor Bureau
W YORK, Jan. 18—Harvard Club di its play in the second half of lass A squash tennis team chamilp yesterday by winning 6 out of natches from the Crescent Athletic on the latter's courts, while the his University Club improved its in by defeating the Princeton Club, is Harvard team, while Columbia i Princeton and took third place in anding.

R. E. Fink, the national champion, was the only victor for Crescent. He defeated F. V. S. Hyde, the Harvard leader, by the most one-aided score ever played between them, 15—4, 17—15. In previous encounters, the match has depended on the final points, but this time Fink was siways in command, the former title holder being extremely unsteady in his shooting, driving into the telifials for most of the points scored by Fink. Only in the second game, when Hyde led at 9—2, was he at all in his former form. Hyde also led at 14—19, on a streak of wildness by Fink, but at this point the latter settled into his same, and after tieing the score at 14 all, won the match two innings later on the errors of Hyde.

R.G. Coburn, Harvard Club, defeated C. W. Fyfe, Crescent A. C., 16—4, 15—11.

The usual leaders were missing on both the Columbia and Princeton teams, and the play devolved on the leaser players. R. B. Haines, still in the Class B ranks, scored the greatest success for Columbia when he defeated A. W. Riley, who has been a strong competitor in national championships in past years, after a hard-fought, threegame contest, coming from behind to competitor in national championships in past years, after a hard-fought, three-game contest, coming from behind to with the second game, after dropping the first by a one-sided score. The final score was 7—15, 18—14, 15—16. Most of the other matches were also very close, with extra point games necessary, but in most cases the home players were slightly superior, and managed to win. The battle between J. C. Neely, the Chicago veteran, and W. A. Kimbel, the former basketball star, was especially well fought, Kingsley Kunhardt, Columbia University

RUGGED CONTEST IS EXPECTED TONIGHT

The visiting Berlin Hockey Association sextet will play the second of its two-game series at the Boston Arna tonight, meeting the Boston Athletic Association. Owing to the visitors' speed, and constant use of their bodies in checking, a hard, rugged contest is looked for.

checking. a hard, rugged contest is looked for.

Last night the New Hampshire sextet defeated the Boston College team, 3 to 1. The locals were handicapped by the absence of John Culhane, one of the best college wingmen in this vicinity, and a lack of capable substitutes.

The work of the visitors outer defense pair, C. W. Spriggins and James McLaughlin, was mainly responsible for the defeat of the locals. Spriggins and McLaughlin each scored in the opening period, and Paul, Gauthier added the third point in the final period. James Foley scored the only goal for B. C. in the second period. The summary:

FOUR TEAMS MEET AT NORTHWESTERN

Believe Quadrangular Contests Will Arouse Interest in Track

EVANSTON, III., Jan. 18 (Special)—Quadrangular track and fieldemeta between Northwestern University, University of Chloago, Ohlo State University and University of Wisconsin, scheduled this year for the first time, are expected to aid these institutions in developing teams that will be better able to hold their own with the stronger members of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association, it is stated here by Frank Hill, the Northwestern track coach.

"We will benefit by holding the indoor quadrangular meet here," said-Hill, "because it will arouse much more interest than the dual meets. If we can increase the number of spectators at our track meets we will get more athletes coming out for the sport, naturally.

"The constrangular meets will be can increase the number of spectators at our track meets we will get more athletes coming out for the sport, naturally.

"The quadrangular meets will be more popular attractions because they will offer better competition by teams and individuals as well. Take a dual track meet. Most any team is strong in some events, so strong that those events are a walkaway for it, while the opposing team may be so strong in other events that it gets no real competition.

"These -quadrangular meets will be second in interest only to the conference championship games. The first indoor four-cornered series is to be held here. Feb. 17. Next year it will be held at Ohio State University. Northwestern and Ohio have the only suitable accommodations for the indoor events. Outdoors the best facilities are offered at University of Wisconsin, where this year's spring event is to be held, and at University of Chicago, which will get it next year.

"One interesting feature of these quadrangular meets is that the only distance events on the track will be relays. It is the relays that developenthusiasm, draw a crowd and stir team rivairy. We are to have a four-faile relay a two-mile relay, a one-mile relay and a two-mile medley. In the medley one man will run a half, two men will run a quarter, and one will run a mile."

Northwestern's track team this season, is very much in need of such development as Coach Hill anticipates will come from the quadrangular meets. While in point of numbers it is equal to other Purple squads of recent years, it does not have even the few outstanding individuals it has displayed before. The average ability of the average candidate, however, is higher than that of last year.

The chief strength of the Purple will be in the middle distance runs in which

The average ability of the average candidate, however, is higher than that of last year.

The chief strength of the Purple will be in the middle distance runs in which Capt. H. K. Kahn 24 competes. Captain Kahn is practically the only outstanding athlete on the squad. There are six other letter winners, of last year, but they are likely to get lost in the crowd at the big conference meets.

Captain Kahn has shown remarkable development under the training of Coach Hill. When he came out for freshman work he had never had any athletic experience. During his freshman year he ran the half-mile in 2m. 22s., but in his sophomore year he chaiked up a mark of 1m. 58s., showing in a concrete way the progress he has made. Last year he qualified for the finals at the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association meet at Ann Arbor and also in the National Collegiate Athletic Association meet at Chicago.

Another letter winner-out for middle distances is D. B. Calhoun 24. Two new men are Charles Booth 28 and C. M. Cole 25. R. B. Leveland 26. specializes at the mile, and A. O. Martin '25. is showing promise at the mile and half mile.

In the two-mile events there are J. P.

Tufts of Medford, Mass., yesterday set a new record for the No. 3 course here, completing the 18 holes in 68 strokes. The brilliant mark was made while playing as partner of Edward Gow of Weston, Mass., against P. W. Whittemore, Brookliner and Donald Ross of Pinehurst.

Because of the brilliant work of Tufts, Whittemore and Ross never had a chance of winning and were eliminated, 7 and 6.

By Cable from Monitor Burens When Charles Warren and Charles Marr complete their game tonight in the Royal amateur three-cushion billiards championship play at the State Theater Club, all of the eight contestants will have played. Warren is the last scheduled to play. Robert Rose defeated E. L. Lyons last, night 50 to 4 in a closely contested game which went 115 innings. The latter was 16 points in the rear at one stage of the game. The high run for each player was three.

Bonds Irregular

With the recent advance in speculative railroad bonds checked by a wave of profit-taking, and French governmental and municipal issues yielding in sympathy with the hesitancy of exchange rates, an irregular trend developed in today's early bond dealings. French 7½s and the municipal issues, with the exception of Lyons 6s, lost ground. The railroad list was spotty, St. Paul issues continuing strong together with Kansas City Southern 5s and Canadian Northern 7s. Colorado & Southern 4½s, which advanced almost 2 points yesterday, lost most of their gains, and Denver & Rio Grande convertible 4s, Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s and Frisco 5s also yielded on profit-taking. U. S. Government and Treasury issues were firm. Trading was in lighter volume.

Further accumulation of Lehigh Valley and Pittsburgh & West Virginia, which advanced 2 and 3½ points respectively, had a steadying influence on the railroad stocks. Special strength developed in some of the ordinarily inactive issues, Continental Insurance rising 4½. New York Dock preferred 3½, and Brooklyn Union Gas 3.

Call money opened at 4 per cent.

In the early afternoon the speculative favorites were generally retrieved, when the market began to creep up slowly under the impulse of buying of special groups, notably the silk and public utility issues. Barnsdall A, Congoleum, Otis Elevator and several of the dividend-paying railroad shares were also in demand.

NEW YORK LEADS IN BANKS WITH LARGE DEPOSITS

Of 35 National Depositories Having $50,000,000 or More, Metropolis Has 12

There were 35 national banks in the United States having deposits of more than $50,000,000 each, at the close of the calendar year 1923. The deposits of these banks aggregated $5.516,297,000 on Dec. 31, an increase of $602,445,000 since Sept. 14, and $168,163,000 less than 1000 and $1000.

Deposits of the National City Bank of New York Dec, 31, totaled $728,640,of New York Dec. 31, totaled $728,640...

of the deposits in all national banks. It exceeds total deposits of all national banks in Texas—569 in number—and is approximately oftenfith of all national bank deposits in the State of New York. It is approximately 95 per cent of the aggregate deposits of Virginia. West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia.

The National Bank of Commerce, with $448,906,000, holds second place. On Sept. 14 it ranked fourth. Since then its deposits have increased about $119...

The Continental & Commercial of Chicago and the Chase National of New York, both showed good increases, although Chase dropped from second place in September to fourth at the end of December.

Of the 35 banks having deposits ag-place in September to fourth at the end of December.

Of the 35 banks having deposits agreesating more than $50,000.000, 12 are in New York City, three in Chicaso, four in Boston, four in Philadelphia, three in San Francisco. There are 10 cities with one bank or more in the $50,000.000 class.

While many states have no $50,000.000 national bank, the south is the only section that has no such bank. Trust companies are more in favor in the south than national banks. However, the 13 southern states have 1695 national banks out of $238 for the United States.

DULLEST PERIOD IN FORTY YEARS FOR CLYDE SHIPMAKERS

GLASGOW, Jan. 1 (Special Correspondence)-Not for 40 years has there been so poor an output in the Clyde shipbuilding industry as during 1923. There were only 154 launches, aggregating 175,571 tons, as compared with 400,000 tons in 1922, the output in the gating 175,571 tons, as compared with 400,000 tons in 1922, the output in the latter year having been the lowest since 1386.

The record production for the Clyde in any one year was in 1913, when close upon 800,000 tons were reached, and it is reckoned that with all the establishments working to their fullest capacity a total quantity of 1,000,000 tons could now be turned out in a year, the capacity of many of the yards having been largely increased since the outbreak of wær.

There are, however, signs of a silver lining in the clouds, and since the termination of the long-drawn-out dispute in the boliermaking business there has been a welcome revival in the order market. A great boom is not anticipated, but the closing days of the year have seen the booking of quite a numbers of orders for new shrips. For the fourth year in succession no naval ships were built on the Clyde.

A noteworthy feaure of the last year's work is that few orders were received from abroad. In 1922 the ships for foreign countries equaled fully half the total for British shippers, but in 1923 it was less than a twelfth.

Of the 154 vessels built 119, with a tonnage of 154,643, were for British Arms: 21 vessels and tonnage 835 for the British dominions, and for foreign countries 14 vessels with a tonnage of 12,093.

TO SAVE BANK

QUEBEC, Jan. 18-On the declaration of Premier Taschereau that imme-diate action was necessary to prevent dividends to $7.95 a share on the 405.a panic of depositors of La Banque Nacionale, the Legislature last night approved the Government's Bank Merger Bill, providing for an issue of $15,000,000 in bonds, to be turned over to the Hochelaga Bank when that institution absorbs La Banque Nacionale. The Premier said there had been a run on La Banque Nacionale and that, if the people learned that the Legislature had hesitated in the matter of credit, the run would be continued and the bank cleaned out. Principal and interest payable in the City of New York in United States gold coin without deduction for any Argentine taxes or impositions present or future. Interest payable March 1 and September 1. Coupon bonds in denominations of $1,000 and $500 registerable as to principal only.

For further information regarding this issue of Bonds reference is made to a letter received from Felipe A. Espil, Esq., Charge d'Affaires of the Government of the Argentine Nation at Washington, copies of which may be obtained from the undersigned and which he has summarized as follows:

GENERAL: "The Argentine Republic has an area of approximately 1,100,000 square miles or over one-third of the area of the United States, and leads all South American countries in volume of foreign trade. There are today 22,355 miles of railroad. The Government itself has considerable mileage under construction."

FINANCES:) "The national debt as of December

31, 1928, at gold parities of exchange, amounts to Pesos 932,060,000 gold, being equivalent to $100 U. S. per capita as against over $200 per capita for the United States. In addition, the Nation guarantees the bonds of the National Mortgage Bank which is self-supporting and has a large reserve of its own. Argentine credit in Europe ranks very high. A large number of pre-war Argentine loans are listed in London and on the Continental Stock Exchanges of Europe, none of which carries a higher interest rate than 5%. During the war, the Argentine Republic made large advances to some of the Allies, besides repurchasing a large part of the

Net Income of $5,000,000 in 1923 is Expected—Broad-casting a Big Factor

The publication around March 1 of the annual report of the Radio Corporation of America is expected to disclose a net income of approximately $5,000,000 before taxes, amortization of patents and miscellaneous charges. After allowance of $1,384,550, covering dividends at 7 per cent on $3,055,974 shares of outstanding preferred stock, par $5, the balance of $3,615,410 will be equal to $3 cents a share on $7,74,000 shares of common stock, no par, now outstanding.

This compares with net of $2,974,580 for 1922, all of which was applied to amortization of patents, taxes and organization expenses. A committee will decide how much if any, will be written off for amortization for 1923. On Dec 31, 1922, patents stood at $18,735,222.

Preferred Dividend Likely

On Dec. 31, 1922, cash stood at $246,-889. It is likely this item will be twice as large in the forthcoming report.
Directors meet later this month and as the dividend on the preferred is cumulative as of Jan. 1, it is considered likely that a quarterly disbursement of 1% per cent, or 8% cents a share, will be considered.

An official said: "We have had the

An official said: "We have had the most prosperous year in our history and have the cash to pay the dividend, so that we are in a position to consider the declaration of the same." The company has declared no dividends to date. There is no funded debt.
Radio's gross in 1923 was approximately $23,000,000, compared with $14, $25,086 in 1922 and $4,160,845 in 1921. The rapid increase in the public's use of radio instruments by inauguration of broadcasting three years ago has been largely responsible for the immense increase.

been largely responsible for the immense increase.

In 1922 only $3,544,367 was obtained from Transatiantic communication and marine service out of nearly $15,000,000 business and the same ratio is expected to be shown for 1923.

Operating expenses in 1922 were exceedingly high, totaling $12,126,464 of $14,830,857 gross income. The ratio is expected to be lower this year because of high charges due to experimental work in broadcasting during 1922.

Research and Experimentation Of course, the development of the radio never stands still and a company like this will continue to spend large like this will continue to spend large sums in experiment, but as the years pass this will be more systematized so that cost is likely to be smaller with a larger degree of efficiency. In 1923 approximately $1,500,000 was spent on approximately $1,500,000 was spent on radio research alone.

The Radio Corporation was organized in the latter part of 1919 with 5,000,000 preferred shares authorized, par $5, and 5,000,000 common shares authorized, no par, the latter being increased to 7,500,000 shares in May, 1921.

The principal Radio shareholders a year ago included General Electric, which, held 1,876,000 common and 620, preferred: Westinghouse, 1,000,000 common and 1,000,000 preferred, and United Fruit, 160,000 common and 200,000 preferred. During 1923 it is understood both the General Electric and the United Fruit liquidated some of their holdings.

Broadcasting Development

Broadcasting Development
The fortunes of Radio Corporation turned with broadcasting. Prior to the advent of public interest in this form of wireless, the company was working forward very slowly in its transoceanic and marine wireless message business.
The advent of broadcasting has given needed capital and opportunity to push transoceanic business throughout the world until it has become a formidable competitor of the cables and is handling approximately 20 per cent of all transoceanic business.

A Great Educator

Of 563 broadcasting stations, 50 are important. Many subscribers are of the opinion that the ideal situation would be to have five leading concerns sending first-class matter.

Radio is one of the greatest educators and has brought music, lectures, speeches and talks by leading people not only to the homes of America but to the entire world. London has danced to music played by a Pittsburgh band; Kansas has listened to a concert in Paris; and there is no reason why the Paris; and there is no reason why the peoples of the earth will not listen to the presidential inauguration speech in the presidential inauguration speech in 1924.

There are 746 watts in one horse-power, and the human voice must be multiplied 74,500,000,000 times to make a horsepower. The human voice is equal to only one hundred-millionth of a watt-yet radio will carry that voice to the ends of the earth.

The entire population of the world.

to the ends of the earth.

The entire population of the world, or 2,000,000,000 people, shouting at the same moment would be only one-thiriteth the power of a single broadcasting station. Experts are endeavoring to develop the sending of pictures and photographs by radio across the ocean, and it is only a question of time when this will be accomplished. President H. B. Thayer, of American Telephone & Telegraph Company, talked with England over the wireless telephone a year ago. It is hoped that in due time Mr. Thayer will be able to see the person with whom he is speaking.

and will exceed dividend requirements of $5.760,000 by $2,000,000, or $3,000,000. At present 720,000 shares of common stock are outstanding on which dividends at the rate of 8 per cent annually have been paid since 1913, when the rate was increased from 7 per cent. This record of continuous dividend payments has been maintained in face of the fact that no advance in rates was made in the war period of high costs. In order to take care of its rapidly growing business, $25,000,000 was spent in 1923 for new construction and approximately the same amount will be spent this year.

To provide for expansion last year $15,000,000 first mortgage collateral 5s, due 1953, were sold in December, and stockholders of record Dec: 22, 1922, were given the right to subscribe for $12,000,000 new stock at par early last year, bringing capitalization up to its present figure. The total funded debt is now $74,774,000.

In 1922, the previous record year, $6,276,375, or $10,64 a share, was earned on the $60,000,000 capital stock then outstanding. Earnings a share have been at practically the same rate for the last four years, despite the fact that capital stock has been increased from $50,422,800 in 1919. In 1921, $9.67 a share was earned; in 1920, $9.23, and in 1919, $9.61.

JAPANESE LOAN EXPECTED JAPANESE LOAN EXPECTED
NEW YORK, Jan. 18—Reports of a Japanese loan have been revived in Wall Street. Conferences are said to have taken place between New York bankers and Japanese interests relative to the sale of $79,000,000 of that country's bonds in this market, but no agreement has been resched on terms.

HOG PRICES SHOW AN UPWARD TREND

Smaller Receipts Expected From Now On Cattle Market Steady to Firm

CHICAGO, Jan. 18 (Special) -Accord-CHICAGO, Jan. 18 (Special)—According to a survey made at the first of the year, the big surplus of hogs has passed the crest of market volume, and from now on lighter receipts may, be expected. The survey shows a decrease of 6 per cent in the number of sows farrowed in the fall of 1923, compared with 1922. Many sows have been marketed because the farmer has been discouraged at the prices received for hogs.

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Jan. 18-A remarkable flutter occurred in the stock exchange here yesterday when, in consequence chiefly of Amsterdam buying orders, German 4 per cents rose by rapid stages from 10s. 9d. to 12s.; Prussian 3 per cent bonds from 15s. to 21s., and Prussian 4½ per cents from 11s. to 19 %s.

This remarkable rush is associated American Telephone, which bought 500,000 shares preferred of the Radio Corporation, paying an aggregate of $2,500,000, sold its entire holdings for approximately $3,000,000, which, after interest and costs, represented a profit of approximately 15 per cent to the Telephone Company. A large proportion of Telephone holdings of Radio were sold in the open market.

The argument admittedly is so incomplete, however, that an early reaction cannot be relied on not to occur.

den. The No. 2 furnace is furnishing iron sufficient for demands, no price under $22 having been accepted.

All southern furnaces are now asking $22 for No. 2 foundry and one of the smaller companies is asking $23. The prediction is made that iron prices by the second quarter will be at $25 a ton.

The cast iron pipe industry continues active and plants may run at capacity at least eight months on what business is in hand and in sight. Gas and water nipe making plants are receiving letpipe making plants are receiving let-tings which are adding steadily to business in hand and many specifica-tions are still to be heard from.

REVENUE FREIGHT CAR LOADINGS

NEW YORK, Jan. 18-In the week ended Jan. 5 loadings of revenue freight were 703,269 cars, an increase of 87,838 were 703,269 cars, an increase of $7,838 over the previous week, according to the American Railway Association. Compared with the corresponding week last year, this was a decrease of 64.27, but was 103,836 over two years ago.

Increases over the week before in loading of all commodities were reported in all districts, while the Pocahontas and southwestern districts reported in-creases over last year, while all other districts showed decreases. All districts, however, reported increases over two

The 1922 arrivals reached 1837, but it was the unprecedented receipt of forcign coal that bolstered figures in that year. Carrying American goods, 1036 merchantmen salled for foreign ports from Boston. Clearances in 1922 totaled 1214, while 1921 departures numbered 977.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER

INTERNATIONAL PAPER

NEW YORK, Jan. 18—International

Paper's 1923 production is expected to total 540,000 tons of all grades, twothirds being newsprint. The company is operating close to capacity on newsprint, but has closed the Winnipiseogee mil, making 45 tons of special papers a day, on account of the dull market. Competition of foreign grade paper may force further curtailment on these grades.

general business activity unless that fundamental producing industries have a sustained large output.

This is the month of automobile shows and the reports indicate that the crowds are as large and the general interest as great as they were last year. This is partly because the automobile has become a part of the standard of living. Many new improvements appear on the latest models.

Despite the great appeal made by notable recent improvements in automobile design, it seems probable that the controlling factor in determining the number of new machines that can be sold this year will be the earning power of the industrial workers, who purchase a large part of the lower priced machines, and a great potion of the used ones that must be traded in to make possible the sales of new mediumgrade cars.

Charles Dickens, Architect

large or small, dream or true—is, to some of us, to think of Dickens. Nowhere coutside of his books are such distinctive, friendly, intimate, and altogether delightful structures to be discovered. Who but he has given us so many houses with personality, to be loved and cherished, along with their inmates and almost as much. Who could have given us Blunderstone Rookery, the one rookey in all the world with no rooks, boasting as well a pigeon-house with no pigeons, and a great dog kennel with no dog, at least in its happier day? I love that front garden with its fall old elm trees flying the shreds of low that front garden with its fall old elm trees flying the shreds and a padlock—even as the little book who should have been in Peggoty's kitchen, traversed the long passage to the front, door, shuddred at the dark storeroom opening out of it, sat in the parlor of evening in the back—a very preserve of the tendent of the dark storeroom opening out of it, sat in the parlor of evening in the best room on Sundays, seen the limitable Miss Beisey flattering her nose against the front window. And I, too, have mourned to think of the dear old place as altogether aban doned, of the winds of winter howling round, of the cold raims beating upon the giass, and the moon making shosts on the walls of the empty rooms.

However, for sheet and utter charm the aforesald rookery does not surroom.

However, for sheet and utter charm the aforesaid rookery does not surpass the home of the Peggoty's. It could not. There never was such another truly delightful abode as "the ship-looking thing," "the sort of ark," as Davy termed it, sitting solitary upon the dry ground of the Yarmouth shore overlooking, sea and river and desonate waste. The conversion of that black barge or superannuated boat into a dwelling, the roofing of it, the cutting of that delightful door in the side, was a master's work to the last stroke. And the resulta—they spak for themselves. There was the beautifully clean and tidy interior where a cheery fire burned as the grate, where the table, the Dutok clock, the chest of drawers, the tray, and the lockers kept company with the colored pictures of Scriptural subjects and the picture of the Sarah Jare lugger with the real little wooden stern stuck on it. And there was the little bedroom in the stern of the vessel, according to Davy "the completest and most desirable bedroom ever seen; with a Bitle window where the rudder used to go through; a little looking-glass, just the right height for me; nailed against the wall, and framed with oyster-shells; a little bed, which there was just room enough to get into; and oak seats in them, that seemed to have one of the same trees as the shining four quaint windows, which had old oak seats in them, that seemed to have come of the same trees as the shining oak floor, and the great beams in the celling," to sleep in the "glorious old room (above) with more oak beams, and diamond panes, and the broad balustrade going all the way up to it," surely this was compensation for leaving the Dover cottage.

If not, then there was the Spenlow house at Norwood with its breakfast-parlour of "the most sumptuous na-ture," its lovely garden so beautifully kept, its charming lawn with clusters of trees and perspective walks arched over with trellis-work, wherein young Copperfield met Jip and his mistress one fair morning. Or there was that beautiful little house in Highgate "with everything so bright and new; with the flowers on the carpets look-ing as if freshly gathered, and the green leaves on the paper as if they had just come out; with the spotless muslin curtains, and the blushing rose-coloured furniture, and Dora's garden hat with the blue ribbon al-

I have named, among many rivers that make music in my memory, that dirty Water of Leith. Often and often I desire to look upon it again; and the choice of a point of view is easy to me. It should be at a certain waterdoor, embowered in shrubbery. The river is there dammed back for the service of the flour mill just below, so that it lies deep and darkling, and the sand slopes into brown obscurity with a glist of gold. . . . Or so it was when I was young; for change, and the masons, and the pruning-knife, have been busy; and if I could hope to repeat a cherished experience, it must be on many and impossible conditions. I must choose, as well as the point I must choose, as well as the point of view, a certain moment in my growth, so that the scale may be exaggerated, and the trees on the steep opposite side may seem to climb to heaven, and the sand by the water-heaven, and the sand by the water-the bird is mute, the sea choose up its waves, from r door, where I am standing, seem as low as Styx. And I must choose the season also, so that the valley may be brimmed like a cup with sunshine and the songs of birds; and the year of grace, so that when I turn to leave the riverside I may find the old manse ert Louis Stevenson, in "The Manse." of Michael Field."

The Path Down to the Lake

RAND, inscrutable, venerable, stand these two stately firs beside the trail leading from the rim to the surface of Crater Lake. Crater Lake lies in the summit of the Cascade Range, in southern Oregon. This chain of mountains ex-tends from British Columbia across Washington and Oregon to northern California, and parallels the coast of the Pacific which lies one hundred and fifty miles to the west. The average height of the Cascade Range is perhaps five thousand feet, but the range is peculiar in that it has half a score of isolated peaks which rise to more than twice that height and are perpetually snow covered. These peaks are of volcanic origin, and in some remote period one of the largest must have risen from the present site of Crater Lake.

Nothing could be more discouraging than to believe that there is a real power opposed to God. Every one has had to face the false evidence of seeming obstacles to good, to righteous endeavor; but how comforting to learn, as demonstrably taught in Christian Science, that in reality the infinite God has no opposite, and, consequently, that there is no real obstacle to good! Stately Science pauses not, but moves before them, a pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, leading to divine heights.

Today, thousands upon thousands of world-weary men and women are finding in the Bible and the Christian Science textbook dependable guides out of the woes and uncertainty of material existence into the joys and permanence of spiritual living. They are proving, little by little, that divine Love does go before them, making the "crooked places straight" and breaking "in pieces the gates of brass," that is, overcoming every seeming obstruction ences as an apostle of Christ Jesus, to truth and right. These wise guides show how mankind, by accepting on! sistlessness of Truth that, chiding the thopes, motives, desires, and churches of Galatia, he wrote, "Who thoughts which originate in divine did hinder you that ye should not obey Mind, God, the one primal cause, must inevitably proceed in their thoughts less, many down through the ages have words, and deeds, to fuller underasked themselves. Now that Mr. Stanley Baldwin's Government has accepted the adverse verdict of the British electorate upon Labor's Prospects in Britain its policy of protection and is about to give place to free trade and a Labor administration, the time has come to consider what this change amounts to. Mr. Ramsay Macdonald has many wild sayings in the past to live down. He also has a limited number of extremists among his following to satisfy. Nothing could be more moderate and constitutional, however, than the speeches he has made since the responsibilities of office began to cast their shadows over him.

The men who are to be ministers of state under him all suffer from inexperience. It is this very fact, however, which increases their dependence upon the permanent officials—always a highly cautious body of men. They further find themselves in a position where they can retain office only as long as they do nothing whereof the Liberals, as a party, disapprove. This precludes all legislation directed to the furthering of socialistic experiments, to which they are individually committed, though it leaves them some latitude as regards executive action directed to this end. It follows that so far as Great Britain's new domestic policy is concerned, no sudden or dramatic changes are to be expected, though there may be a further widening of the franchise and a general tendency to increase the national expenditure schemes on health, unemployment, insurance, housing and pensions, with an enhancement of the income tax and other demands upon capitalist classes, to facilitate a reduction of the fiscal burdens upon the poor.

This may possibly affect Great Britain's position as a great industrial and financial world power. It threatens no revolution, however, nor can the changes made be either abrupt or subversive of the constitutional tradition of a country whose path through the centuries has been by way of easy, if unromantic, steps of continual compromise and agreement. In foreign affairs, a Labor Government offers no new program. It may recognize Russia and adopt blunter language to France and Belgium than was ventured upon by the more diplomatically minded administration it replaces. It may refuse preference to the British overseas dominions, reduce commitments to Arabs and favor an extension of democratic experiments in Egypt and in India. The pacific policy of disarmament, to which it is committed, at least in theory, however, must temper its action with caution. Britain's relations with the outside world will be upset by diplomatists who may use plainer terms than their predecessors but are in no stronger position to support their words. International commitments cannot be got rid of either quickly or at pleasure, nor is the structure of the British Empire so frail as to be easily broken or displaced.

Mr. Macdonald's intention is to show that Labor is neither incompetent nor visionary, and that it can govern successfully. His difficulties are those of administrationrather than legislation. Mistakes will no doubt be made but the Monitor learns that he hopes to carry on for six months. After that he will be content to be thrown out in the expectation of an eventual feturn to the realities. as well as the trappings, of power. Meanwhile little that is sensational is to be expected. The Great Britain under a Labor Government must remain much like the Great Britain of former times.

THE State Department at Washington has made it plain to Adolfo de la Huerta, leader of the insurgent movement in Mexico, that there must be no continuance of the effort to maintain a blockade against the port of Tampico. It is sought to impress the fact that the movement of neutral ships, and particularly ships flying the United States flag, in the harbor at Tampico, has no effect one way or the other, upon the military operations being carried on by President Obregon's enemies. But perhaps General de la Huerta may reasonably demand specific proof of this claim. Surely he is cognizant of the fact that the governmental department which is now insisting upon the complete neutrality. of a Mexican port is the same one that recently gave official approval to the sale by Americans of guns, munitions, and airplanes to the Mexican Government, against which he is waging aggressive warfare. He quite naturally might suspect that United States ships would be willing to aid the transfer of munitions and equipment, and that a reasonable measure of retaliation or defense is the closing of any port over which he has authority.

It may not be difficult to convince General de la Huerta, against his better judgment, that it is wise for him to comply with the polite request from Washington. Might seems sometimes to make right, despite the copybook assurance that it never does. But one may reasonably inquire if it would be in accord with the expressed attitude of the people and Government of the United States to compel obedience to this request by a show of force or a resort to coercive methods. Probably it is the inclination of most of Mexico's neighbors north of the Rio Grande to believe that the theory of neutrality had been stretched to the extreme limit when authorization was given to the sale of materiel to the Mexican Government to be used in even a defensive warfare against ignorant peons and half-civilized Indians who have been misled and inflamed by ambitious politicians. It is said that of the 14,000,000 inhabitants of Mexico. some 11,000,000 are Indians, whose condition is but little better than slavery. For generations subjugated by exploiting Spanish adventurers, they have been left in the wake of civilization and progress.

It is a tradition among the Mexican Indians and those of the peon class that they have been made the victims of American greed. And this belief is shared, to some extent, by many who are less ignorant. Everywhere in Central America there exists, among many, a suspicion of the good faith of the larger Republic to the north. In Mexico, particularly, as many familiar with conditions there knew full well, recognition of the Obregon regime would be accepted as the signal which his enemies awaited to begin their opposition to him and to his Administration. They seemed to believe that when it was made to appear that he was a friend of the United States he could thereafter be nothing but their acknowledged foe.

Critics of the present Washington policy as it affects Mexico are free to say that a nation which claims to adhere to democratic ideals cannot consistently aid war by commercializing the traffic in arms and munitions of war. They will admit, no doubt, that between the ignorant masses of struggling Mexicans and the realization of democracy's highest ideals a great gulf is fixed. But it is not foo much to insist that if that ideal is ever realized there must be a beginning. There must be a working toward that realization, rather than away from it.

To THOSE who know both Constantinople and Angora there is nothing very extraordinary in the series of trials of leading Turkish journalists and other prominent men which recently agitated the country and which threatened to induce consequences of vital importance to the entire Moslem world. The publication in the Constantinople press of the letter wherein the Aga Khan and Ameer Ali urged Ismet Pasha and the Grand Assembly to consider the advisability of giving the Caliph a more definite position in Turkish body politic, before that letter had been received by the Turkish Prime Minister, was admittedly a breach of ordinary courtesy. It was, however, very soon explained that the real fault for this discourtesy lay not so much with the Turkish newspapers as with the senders themselves. In any case, however, even the publication of such a letter could not possibly have justified so extreme a measure as the setting up of an exceptional tribunal intrusted with the most far-reaching powers.

This breach between Angora and Constantinople dates really from the first days of the allied occupation, and more especially from the opening of that Nationalist movement which was so wonderfully organized by Mustapha Kemal Pasha. The Nationalists who were determined to fight for the tearing up of the Treaty of Sevres regarded the late Sultan as nothing but a traitor and they were inclined to regard all who did not quit Constantinople and enroll themselves under the Nationalist banner as little, if any, better,

The Turks of Constantinople were thought to have been contaminated by the influence of the Allies and of the large resident population of Greeks and Armenians. In their determination to get rid for ever of the old Sultanic system, the Nationalists have hitherto left the Caliph, stripped of all his temporal powers, in an anomalous position, so that he is the merest lay figure. Had the Grand' Assembly managed to give proof of any exceptional administrative ability all might yet have been well. But, that unfortunate body, woefully hampered by lack of money and feeling that until the Treaty of Lausanne shall have been ratified they are still in a quasi state of war, has been able to do very little to improve the many hardships under which the country is suffering.

The Grand Assembly has, it is true, spent a considerable part of its energy in considering amendments to the Constitution in the hope of introducing a more practical form of government than that whereby the Assembly was at once the supreme legislative and executive authority. And this course might have met with considerable approval had it not been for the unexpectedly rapid way in which the first of these amendments were forced upon the country when the Republic was proclaimed. For the alarm was taken that unduly great powers had been conferred upon Kental, and it was even hinted in the Tanin, the editor of which is the most distinguished journalist in Turkey, who was the first man to be arrested, that Kemal was aiming at making himself Sultan of Turkey. The Aga Khan's letter was the last straw, and the Government decided to embark on its course of drastic action in order to ascertain whether there was really a danger of a movement to restore the Sultanate.

It is, however, remarkable to see what an animus against the Caliphate the deputies from Angora have brought with them to their task. If, therefore, the Grand Assembly proceeds to such further measures as certain circles appear to be contemplating, in the last resort, it may stir up a revolt which will not be confined to Turkey, but may also spread to those other Moslem countries, the rulers of which would be only too glad to seize upon all the prestige of the Caliphate which seems to be so lightly esteemed by Angora.

PERHAPS it is because the senators and representatives in Congress who have undertaken to stem the current of popular sentiment favorable to the Mellon plan for tax reduction found, during the short holiday recess, that the tide has set in hard against them, that they have returned to Washington determined to strengthen their position at any cost. The Administration policies decided upon by the President seem the special target at which their shafts are leveled. All sorts of inquiries are proposed, but perhaps the really unique one of the lot is that sponsored by Senator James A. Reed (D.), of Missouri. He professes indignationeven righteous indignation-because the people have responded, almost unanimously, in expressions of approval of the Administration's revenue measure. He claims to believe a campaign has been conducted in favor of this plan, and that this is an "insult to the congressional mind." He wants to know who is responsible for this.

It does not appear that others in either house of Congress share this suspicion expressed by the Missouri Senator, and it is not probable that the matter will be .

taken seriously by his colleagues, anxious as some of them seem to be to make political capital out of an issue which, so far as the people are concerned, has already been virtually decided. Some good friend of Senator Reed should be considerate enough to call his attention to the fact that immediately following the sending up of the trial balloon by which the Administration sought to gauge public sentiment toward the Mellon plan, and long before there was any opportunity, even if there was a desire, to influence the thought of the people, almost unanimous approval was given to the proposed measure. It is to counteract this outspoken and spontaneous action that a few politicians in Congress are seeking to make it appear that the people have been imposed upon.

The people have not been imposed upon or deceived: Neither has the "congressional mind" been insulted nor its prerogatives usurped. It might be as well at this critical juncture for any legislators who share, or profess to share, Senator Reed's suspicions, to give serious consideration to their own positions and the relations they bear to the people who, in this silent referendum, have expressed their desires and their convictions. They are, or should be, more than theoretically the representatives of the people whose votes elected them. They are answerable now, just as they promised to be when they pleaded for support at the polls, to their constituents. If there has been an insult it is not to the "congressional mind," but to the people themselves, against whom it is inferentially charged that they are incompetent to judge for themselves what is to their advantage. The voters have not committed themselves to the guardianship of their political servants.

CANADA is evidently being kept well abreast of modern progress in the use of radio telegraphy to help the mariner, the new station at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, being the seventh direction-finding station to be set up along the ocean paths of commerce to Canada. When mariners write in to thank the Dominion Marine Department for the "very prompt and efficient service" of the direction-finding stations given to ships sometimes under very difficult navigation conditions, it is encouraging evidence of the practical value of the service. One British master mariner's report on the accuracy of the direction-finding bearings off Cape Race, Newfoundland, last October, included the comment: "These stations are a godsend to us mariners." The navigator on one of the United States coast guard vessels which are maintained on the international ice patrol, off the Grand Banks, said:

Further evidence of the wonderful accuracy and efficiency of the Canadian direction-finding stations has been evidenced during the past two days, when no astronomical fixes have been possible.

The value of the wireless service is particularly apparent during foggy weather. The ordinary wireless equipment is all that is needed on the vessel at sea to send in a call to the shore station and to get an answer giving accurate bearings. The operator in the directionfinding station is able to figure out the bearing of the vessel, from the information recorded on the receiving instrument, to within one-half mile, even when the call comes from over a hundred miles of stormy sea.

Reliable as the shore stations are, the radio telegraphic engineers, and probably the navigators too, would prefer to have the process of finding bearings at sea worked out on the ship, rather than by an operator who may be a hundred miles away from the ship. For the benefit of vessels that are equipped with direction-finding apparatus, automatic radio beacons have been erected ashore. The beacons are kept running during foggy weather, automatically broadcasting a characteristic signal which can be picked up by ships at sea.

Another method is to transmit the wireless signal on a beam, like a beam of light, instead of broadcasting the radio waves in all directions, Beam transmitters, like revolving lighthouse signals, are being experimented with in Great Britain, at Inchkeith Island and near the South Foreland lighthouse. A new field of engineering endeavor is being opened up in the use of radio telegraphy as an aid to navigation. Canada, of course, is keeping closely in touch with the British experiments, with the commendable desire to keep the Dominion abreast of the times in maritime signal improvements.

Editorial Notes

PARENTS and others trying to impress on youngsters that "bow-wow" represents a dog will be interested to learn that the theory of onomatopæia-the formation of words to imitate the sound of a thing-which they are using, has an application to the pronunciation of ancient Egyptian words. A great difficulty, that is, which students are facing today in this connection, is the fact that though the consonants of such words are written, the vowels are quite indefinite. It seems to have been established, however, that the name in the old Egyptian tongue for cat is "mau," for dog? "vow-vow," for ram, "ba," and for donkey, "i-aw." The definite establishment of these pronunciations, from the sounds that are being imitated, is said to have furnished a valuable clue to other pronunciations and may do much toward solving the entire problem.

More than eight years have passed since "Toc H" came into being. And what is it? some may ask. It was first a nickname formed from the initials of "Talbot House," which stood in Poperinghe, six miles from Ypres. Then the "T" became "Toc" from the army signals, and its motto, "To Conquer Hate," originated later. Within its kindly embrace there gathered during the war some 500,000 of the men who fought around Ypres. Today Toc H is a "Society of Serving Brethren," having for its membership all manhood above sixteen years of age and with headquarters in London. At its eighth anniversary the Prince of Wales, as patron, was

Uncensored Polish Letters

[The following is the first of two letters received recently from Poland by the Princess Radziwill, who translated and edited them for The Christian Science Monitor. It is doubtful if a more intimate picture of post-war Poland has been given than that contained in these communications from a member of the old aristocracy of that Nation.]

WARSAW, Dec. 5-At last I find an opportunity to write to you without fear of my letter being opened on its way, which unfortunately happens continually in this country, where the Government seems to fear news leaking out of a nature uncomfortable to its policy. This policy about one of the most curious things possible, and it would be impossible to understand its intricacies if one did not know the Polish character, as well as all the personal undercurrents, which alone count for something in Poland. Intellectually and mentally the country, in so far as politics is concerned, has not advanced since the days when it was divided between the three great northern empires, and the only reason it is holding together is because its independence is as necessary today for the safety of a few other nations as its subjection was indispensable to the security of these very same nations, 150 years ago.

We find the same rivalries between different factions, the same unscrupulousness as to means, and the same predominant feeling or the personal advantage of certain people to the detriment of the rest. The aristocracy is still the dominant class, in so far as, in spite of peasant prime ministers, it always has the last word to say in all important decisions. The Polish envoy in Paris, Count Zamoyski, governs Poland far more than its President. If I mention Zamoyski's name it is as a figure of speech, because he is a very decent fellow himself, but all the other great nobles who have kept their fortunes in spite of the war, or who have regained them, thanks to all sorts of shady speculations, would not hesitate before any political compromise if, thanks to it, they could add something to the pile of money they have already accumulated.

In spite of the fall of the exchange, the country is extremely prosperous and rapidly recuperating from its trials and sufferings of the war. Destroyed towns are being fast rebuilt. Agriculture is being carried on extensively and arduously, and the peasants are all rich. Transactions are being done exclusively in American dollars, which have become standard money, even among the ignorant classes. Factories are working at top speed, and there is no doubt but that industrious cities like Lodz, for instance, will soon reach a point of prosperity such as they never knew before. In appearance politics seem forgotten. In reality, a bitter political strife is raging, not so much in regard to interior affairs, but in connection with foreign ones. French influence, of course, is paramount, and France is officially the dominant factor in all Polish actions.

Following upon French indications the Government is pursuing a strong militarist, policy, and the army is the one object of its solicitude. Polish statesmen "kowtow" to France, and pretend they model all their actions according to French inspiration, but it is very doubtful whether in case of a new war with Germany, France would get from Poland the sup-port upon which it reckons. We would find; on the contrary, that unsuspected obstacles would crop up, and prevent the Polish Government from assisting the French, as it had promised them it would do. Fear of the Bolsheviki, for one thing, the weariness of the country and its dislike for war on the other side, would do very much toward keeping Poland neutral. France somehow does not seem to realize this outcome to her aggressive designs, and would most likely, in case of new political complications, have a good many of these disap-pointments which always happen to those who expect too much.

The peasant does not want war, and indeed would much rather join the Russian Bolsheviki than engage in another one. The aristocracy does not want war, either, and would also prefer to it an amicable understanding with the Russian Soviet Government. The latter is admirably well informed as to all that goes on in Warsaw, and plays its cards very carefully, and with consummate skill. It knows that it holds a few important trumps in its hands and it plays them for all that they are worth.

To appreciate its politics one must remember one thing: Most of the great Polish nobles, such as the Lubomirskis, the Branickis, the Potockis, the Sanguszko, were owners of vast properties in Ukrainia, from which the largest part of their immense revenues was gathered. All of these properties have been confiscated or seized by the peasantry, and the Ukrainian Republic has shown itself absolutely opposed to any understanding being arranged between the former owners of all these great estates and their tenants. This has brought about a rankling feeling of antagonism between Ukrainia and Poland, as represented by the latter's upper classes. Now it does not cost anything to the Bolsheviki to work up these feelings, and to give out that they would not at all object to helping the Poles against the Ekrainian Republic, which today is a disturbing factor, both to the Russian and Polish governments. But they say at the same time that their neutrality in case of an Ukrainian-Polish conflict, or their intervention in it on the side of Poland, would have to be repaid by the latter country in its turn remaining neutral in case the Soviets sent their armies through Poland to the help of Germany.

This is the policy which is being practiced at present on a large scale, and which is further enhanced by the peasants' attitude all through the Polish Republic, who, rather than go to war, would be disposed to watch the Russian troops passing through their territory, raying well for all they would require, and thus reaping all kind of advantages from other people's misfortunes. "In one word, Polish policy is essentially a selfish one, intermingled with a certain tendency to sympathize with Russia rather than with France, whose warlike propensities are, nevertheless, exploited for all that they are worth.

Can the Bible Be Rewritten?

EFFORTS to retell the story of the Bible-of which there have been many in the past fifty years-"have all been well meaning and all unsuccessful," writes Basil King in the Bookman. However much other materials may be reshaped, that contained in the Bible, declares Mr. King, "lends itself to no softening processes, to no bland manipulations. You must leave it alone or take it as it is. No more than you can bring down Mount Sir Donald or the Jungfrau to the measure of a hillock in a city public garden, can you coax the mighty pur-pose that sweeps from Genesis to the Apocalypse within the genteel phrases of the nursery or the lingo of a boy at school.

There is no way of doing it. To make the attempt at all betrays the lack of a sense of the colossal. There are phenomena too vast for us to squeeze within our compass. The sky is one; the ocean is another; forests and mountains are others still; but among the works of man the Bible is perhaps the only one. It is not to be judged by any of the canons of literature, art, history, or science. It eludes them all."
